mill, 133 South Fifth East street yesterday, according to the story told by her last night.

She is the young woman who caused the arrest of Albert J. Gemmill and Dr. A. W. Johnson last July, who were held to the district court by Judge Diehl on the charge of procuring and performing a criminal operation on her. Young Gemmill subsequently married her and the prosecution was dismissed. She spent the last five weeks in the Holy Cross hospital, which she says she left Wednesday because her father-in-law did not fulfill his promise to pay the bill she had run up there. She also says her husband took her to the home of his parents after she left the hospital and she remained there Wednesday night, but yesterday his mother ordered her to leave. Alexander Gemmill, the girl's father-inlaw, denies that she was ordered out of his house, and says he was willing to pay the hospital bill, but did not have the ready cash with which to do so. He asserts that she might have remained longer in the hospital and that when she left his house he was looking for a place where she could stop.
